Associates Program

Overview

The Seattle Federal Executive Board's (SFEB) Associates Program is a longstanding, dynamic and unique leadership development program for high performing federal employees. This program has been in existence for at least 20 years, and the SFEB Associate network continues to be active.

The SFEB Associates serve a two-year term where they partner collectively and individually, with fellow associates and participating senior executive service Advisors, from within the SFEB Leadership Council. Each Associate is mentored by a senior executive in addition to working with the senior executive assigned to their committees/working groups. Among other projects, including working with the SFEB Executive Director to carry out the Public Service Recognition and ad hoc events, the Associates develop, implement and execute a significant year end project focused on ambitious goals benefiting the federal workforce, the larger community, and the Associates leadership goals.

During the two consecutive years, staggered cohorts allow for additional learning and exposure and replicate real world staff changes and turnover. Approximately twenty percent of an Associate's work time is devoted to tasks, projects and professional development related to this program. Some activities may require a greater time commitment.

Nominations

Agency executives must recommend Associate applicants with a Letter of Recommendation (details on submitting the Letter of Recommendation are in the application packet). The target candidates for the Associates Program include high-potential GS-9 through GS-12 (or equivalent) employees. Exceptions to that grade level will be considered on a case-by-case basis.

The selection process includes a written application, inclusive of a recommendation from Agency leadership, followed by individual interviews. The selection committee, comprised of the Associate Advisors and chaired by the Executive Director, selects each year's group of Associates. The selection committee considers the following factors:

- The nominee's learning goals for participating in the program
- The commitment of the nominee and their immediate supervisor to dedicate ten to twenty percent of the Associate's work time to the program
- The current capabilities the nominee would bring to the program
- The nominee's potential for professional growth and leadership
- The written recommendation from the nominee's immediate supervisor

Program Requirements

Each Associate is expected to complete the following requirements each year of the program:

- Attend a required three-day* orientation and training meeting in January
- Contribute towards developing a plan for a year long, group project
- Plan, conduct, and attend monthly meetings
- Meet regularly with their program Advisor
- Fully participate in various group activities including training, service projects, and other events approved and planned by the group as a whole
- Complete all reading and study assignments
- Regularly reflect on professional progress and personal growth
- Initiate and complete at least one job shadow assignment
- Participate in the Associates' group project
- Complete training, either individually or with the whole group, that develops:
  - ✓ leadership skills
  - ✓ expanded competencies in project management
  - ✓ group facilitation skills and methods
  - ✓ consensus building decision making skills
  - ✓ communication skills
  - ✓ personal development and self-assessment
- Complete at least two service activities with the Seattle Federal Executive Board
- Attend all SFEB Executive Leadership Council meetings
- Keep his/her supervisor apprised of activities and accomplishments
- Complete an annual self-evaluation

Guiding Principles of Associate Interaction

Associate Program members commit:

- To keep confidences and operate in an environment of trust
- To meet deadlines and timeframes
- To communicate openly and honestly
- To appreciate other team members' points of view

Time and Tuition Commitment:

Length of Program:

The Associates Program runs on the calendar year. Each cohort is an Associate for two full years; staggered cohorts allow for additional learning and exposure and replicate real world staff changes and turnover.

Time commitment:

Approximately twenty percent of an Associate's work time is devoted to tasks, projects and professional development related to this program. This program is not intended to extend an employee's work hours or to incur any overtime.

Associates are expected to attend all monthly meetings, and to fully participate in the committees and the group project. If Associates miss more than 2 of the monthly meetings without an agreement from the Executive Director, they will be dropped from the program without reimbursement.

Tuition:

The tuition for 2022-2024 is $2000 per Associate for the entire two years. The costs of the program cover training fees and meeting materials. Please contact the Executive Director at diana.deforest@gsa.gov or 206-384-2689 with any questions about the tuition.

If Associates or their agencies decide to withdraw them from the program after March 1, 2022, the tuition will not be reimbursed.

Tuition may be submitted to the Federal Executive Board as soon as the Associates are notified of acceptance and should be paid no later than March 1, 2022.

Meetings

Meet and Greet

An introductory meeting is held just prior to the annual Foundations Week in January. It is an opportunity for the new Associates to meet the Advisors and returning Associates, and to learn general information and coordination for the Foundations Week. The Second-Year Associates organize the agenda.

Foundations Week

The SFEB Associates Annual Foundations Week occurs in January as determined by the SFEB Executive Director. It is a three-day intensive training. New Associates receive a program orientation as well as in-depth training on the Associates curriculum. They learn about consensus decision making. In addition, Associates make decisions about the coming year, including the topic of the group project. They develop ground rules and set meeting and training dates. The cost of the retreat is covered by the training funds provided by each agency for the support of their Associate. The agenda for the Foundations Week training is organized by the Second-Year Associates.

Associate Meetings

Associates and Advisors are expected to attend every monthly meeting.

Associates divide into four groups to cover each quarter of the year. In consultation with their Advisor, the quarter groups are expected to:

- develop a meeting agenda for each month
- facilitate the meeting discussions
- take notes to be distributed within a week of the meeting
- lead a structured discussion of the required reading
- coordinate with the Associates Training Committee for the training component of the meeting.
- coordinate at least one social event per quarter.

Executive Leadership Council (ELC) Meetings

Associates are expected to attend Executive Leadership Council (ELC) meetings. These meetings present a unique opportunity to meet and network with federal executives. The Council meets every other month for general discussion, and to determine activities that will advance the mission of the SFEB.

Associate Development

Reading/listening/viewing Assignments

While the program is oriented towards experiential learning, Associates will explore assigned books, podcasts, and reading materials on leadership and management. These materials provide a deeper exposure to relevant topics and motivate Associate discussions. Discussion of the assignments will occur during the monthly Associates meeting.

- Associates lead the discussion of the assigned reading in monthly meetings.
- Associate quarter group members develop discussion themes based on the concepts presented in the reading or material.
- A chapter or section of the reading assignment is presented verbally in summary form.
- Discussion questions are sent out in advance as part of the meeting agenda.
- See Appendix B on “How to Lead a Book Study Discussion.”

Training

The major component of experiential learning is found in the development and execution of the annual group project. The Associates work collectively to select the project, determine goals and objectives, overcome disagreements, and achieve consensus and unity of action.

The Associates program has a curriculum focused on core competencies derived from Senior Executive Service standards as set by the Office of Personnel Management (see appendices). Monthly training topics will ensure relevancy to these core competencies as well as Associates' current needs and individual interests. The Associates Training Committee develops a schedule of trainings that are held as part of each monthly meeting. These trainings primarily use local federal talent and resources, including presentations on leadership from SFEB executive level members.

Journaling

Each Associate is expected to regularly reflect, in writing if possible, on their professional development and personal growth. Journal writing is private but may spark ideas for discussions with Associates and their Advisors. Also, some form of documenting individual process may help with the annual self-evaluation which is expected of each Associate each year. Suggested journaling prompts:

- Was there an event in the program this past month that felt frustrating? How did you deal with it?
- Describe an accomplishment from the past month that you will be able to draw on in the future.
- Evaluate your progress against the goals you set for yourself as a participant in the SFEB Associates program. On a scale of one to ten, how satisfied are you that you are putting your best effort into achieving those goals? What could you do next month to achieve one of those goals?

Advisors

Each Associate is assigned an Advisor each year. The SFEB encourages Advisors and Advisees to meet in person* or virtually at least once a month. It is expected that each Associate will initiate and schedule these appointments with their Advisor. Advisor relationships are intended to provide an opportunity for job skills coaching, confidential feedback, and personal encouragement. Advisors frequently develop a mentor relationship with their Associates, and Associates are also encouraged to develop this relationship to further their leadership education and growth.

Job Shadow

The SFEB Associates program provides access to personal contact with federal executives, as well as local civic and community leaders. Associates must complete at least one job shadow assignment each year and are encouraged to do more. The job shadow can be done with a senior executive, high-level manager, local elected leader, corporate or non-profit executive. Associates may organize a group job shadow to maximize an opportunity. Each Associate should develop a plan for job shadow opportunities in consultation with their Advisors and the SFEB Executive Director. Job shadows may be performed remotely or in person depending on local conditions.

\ If feasible and agreeable*

Projects

Associates' Annual Group Project

Each year the Associates work as a team to develop a project from start to finish. The project needs to be large enough so that every Associate can participate with specific responsibility. Associates brainstorm and research ideas, evaluate choices and select one by consensus decision making. (See Appendix A on consensus decision making).

The selection of a project must balance four major factors:

- opportunities for Associate learning and leadership development
- significance to the federal community
- significance to the wider community
- feasibility

Examples of past projects include:

- 2020: B.R.A.C.E. (Building Readiness for Action in Crisis and Emergencies): Associates worked with subject matter experts in different aspects of personal emergency preparedness to create and deliver nine separate YouTube videos on getting oneself, one's home, family and neighborhood ready to face crises.
- 2019: Project Tiny House: Through collaboration with a local not-for-profit housing agency Associates constructed a "Tiny House" intended to serve as a temporary shelter for a homeless person currently in an encampment. This project served as a window to explore the vexing social issue of homelessness.
- 2018: Inspiring Ideas: Associates organized a series of inspirational talks by prominent federal officials videotaped in front of a live studio audience that are posted on YouTube.
- 2017: Prisoner Re-entry: Associates organized a summit on challenges affecting formerly incarcerated individuals returning to the community. This summit featured the Governor's Secretary for Corrections as the keynote speaker with panel discussions on housing, employment and social services.
- 2016: Promotion of federal service to young adults: Associates organized a series of outreach events to local schools and community groups, then developed a schedule of job shadow activities so young adults could directly experience federal service.
- 2015: Combined Federal Campaign new board formation: OPM required eight CFC campaigns in Washington State to merge into a single governing structure. The Associates organized a regional Summit of the current eight boards and laid the groundwork for the merger of these eight campaigns.

- 2014: Young Government Leaders: Associates founded the Seattle chapter of this national professional development organization.
- 2013: Operation War Fighter: This project was done in collaboration with a DOD funded program to expand federal internship opportunities for returning veterans.

Public Service Recognition

All Associates should participate in the execution of the largest single SFEB sponsored event: the annual Celebration of Public Service for the entire federal community in our service area. This event usually takes place the first week of May. The Director depends on the participation of every Associate to stage this event.

Special Projects

Associates will be asked to participate in special projects with the Seattle Federal Executive Board. Throughout the year, the SFEB Executive Director will request assistance for projects and practical tasks. Examples include working on the SFEB website and social media, assisting with new Associate interviews, and representing the Executive Director at public events.

Committees

Associates will be assigned to a committee in support of the Associates Program and other SFEB sponsored programs and special projects. Committee preferences of Associates are solicited and assignments are made as part of Foundations Week. The Committee details may change from time to time, as decided by the Associates using consensus decision making, but below are the current Associate Committees as of this writing.

Training Committee

- Description: The training committee is responsible for arranging the two-hour training session that is part of each monthly Associates meeting. ## Appendix A: Consensus Decision Making

The Basics of Consensus Decision-Making

by Tim Hartnett, PhD

<http://www.GroupFacilitation.net>

The Principles of Consensus Decision Making

Consensus decision making is a process used by groups seeking to generate widespread levels of participation and agreement. There are variations among different groups regarding the degree of agreement necessary to finalize a group decision. The process of group deliberation, however, has many common elements that are definitive of consensus decision making. These include:

- Inclusive: As many stakeholders as possible are involved in group discussions.
- Participatory: All participants are allowed a chance to contribute to the discussion.
- Collaborative: The group constructs proposals with input from all interested group members. Any individual authorship of a proposal is subsumed as the group modifies it to include the concerns of all group members.
- Agreement Seeking: The goal is to generate as much agreement as possible. Regardless of how much agreement is required to finalize a decision, a group using a consensus process makes a concerted attempt to reach full agreement.
- Cooperative: Participants are encouraged to keep the good of the whole group in mind. Each individual's preferences should be voiced so that the group can incorporate all concerns into an emerging proposal. Individual preferences should not, however, obstructively impede the progress of the group.

An Alternative to Common Decision-Making Practices

Consensus decision making is an alternative to commonly practiced non-collaborative decision making processes. Robert's Rule of Order, for instance, is a process used by many organizations. The goal of Robert's Rules is to structure the debate and passage of proposals that win approval through majority vote. This process does not emphasize the goal of full agreement. Nor does it foster whole group collaboration and the inclusion of minority concerns in resulting proposals. Critics of Robert's Rules believe that the process can involve adversarial debate and the formation of competing factions. These dynamics may harm group member relationships and undermine the ability of a group to cooperatively implement a contentious decision.

Consensus decision making is also an alternative to "top-down" decision making, commonly practiced in hierarchical groups. Top-down decision making occurs when leaders of a group make decisions in a way that does not include the participation of all interested stakeholders. The leaders may (or may not) gather input, but they do not open the deliberation process to the whole group. Proposals are not collaboratively developed, and full agreement is not a primary objective. Critics of top-down decision making believe the process fosters incidence of either complacency or rebellion among disempowered group members. Additionally, the resulting decisions may overlook important concerns of those directly affected. Poor group relationship dynamics and decision implementation problems may result.

Consensus decision making addresses the problems of both Robert's Rules of Order and top-down models. The goals of the consensus process include:

- Better Decisions: Through including the input of all stakeholders the resulting proposals can best address all potential concerns.
- Better Implementation: A process that includes and respects all parties, and generates as much agreement as possible sets the stage for greater cooperation in implementing the resulting decisions.
- Better Group Relationships: A cooperative, collaborative group atmosphere fosters greater group cohesion and interpersonal connection.

The Process of Consensus Decision Making

There are multiple stepwise models of how to make decisions by consensus. They vary in the amount of detail the steps describe. They also vary depending on how decisions are finalized. The basic model involves collaboratively generating a proposal, identifying unsatisfied concerns, and then modifying the proposal to generate as much agreement as possible.

Step 1	Step 2	Step 3	Step 4	Step 5	Step 6
Discussion	Identify Emerging Proposal	Identify Any Unsatisfied Concerns	Collaboratively Modify the Proposal	Assess the Degree of Support

Finalizing a Decision

The level of agreement necessary to finalize a decision is known as a decision rule. The range of possible decision rules varies within the following range:

- Unanimous agreement
- Unanimity minus one vote
- Unanimity minus two votes
- Super majority thresholds (90%, 80%, 75%, two-thirds, and 60% are common).
- Simple majority
- Executive committee decides
- Person-in-charge decides

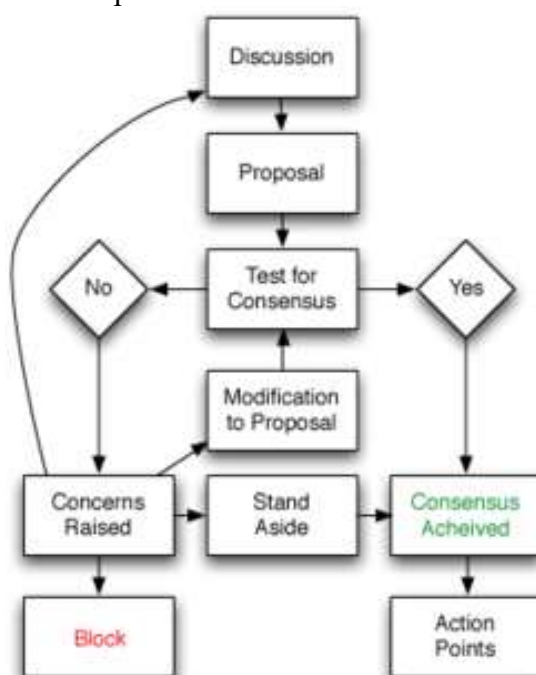

Some groups require unanimous consent (unanimity) to approve group decisions. If any participant objects, he can block consensus according to the guidelines described below. These groups use the term consensus to denote both the discussion process and the decision rule. Other groups use a consensus process to generate as much agreement as possible, but allow decisions to be finalized with a decision rule that does not require unanimity.

Consensus Blocking

Groups that require unanimity allow individual participants the option of blocking a group decision. This provision motivates a group to make sure that all group members consent to any new proposal before it is adopted. Proper guidelines for the use of this option, however, are important. The ethics of consensus decision making encourage participants to place the good of the whole group above their own individual preferences. When there is potential for a group decision to be blocked, both the group and any dissenters in the group are encouraged to collaborate until agreement can be reached. Simply vetoing a decision is not considered a responsible use of consensus blocking. Some common guidelines for the use of consensus blocking include:

- Limiting the option to block consensus to issues that are fundamental to the group's mission or potentially disastrous to the group.
- Providing an option for those who do not support a proposal to "stand aside" rather than block.
- Requiring two or more people to block for a proposal to be put aside.
- Require the blocking party to supply an alternative proposal or a process for generating one.
- Limiting each person's option to block consensus to a handful of times in one's life.

A basic outline of consensus decision making that allows consensus blocking is outlined in this flow chart from Wikipedia: Consensus Decision-making.

Agreement vs. Consent

Unanimity is achieved when the full group consents to a decision. Giving consent does not necessarily mean that the proposal being considered is one's first choice. Group members can vote their consent to a proposal because they choose to cooperate with the direction of the group, rather than insist on their personal preference. Sometimes the vote on a proposal is framed, "Is this proposal something you can live with?" This relaxed threshold for a yes vote can help make unanimity more easily achievable. Alternatively, a group member can choose to stand aside. Standing aside communicates that while a participant does not necessarily support a group decision, he does not wish to block it.

Debate Over Decision Rules

Critics of consensus blocking object to empowering individuals to block otherwise popular proposals. They believe this can result in a group experience of widespread disagreement, the opposite of a consensus process's primary goal. Further, they believe group decision making may become stagnated by the high threshold of unanimity. Important decisions may take too long to make, or the status quo may become virtually impossible to change. The resulting tension may undermine group functionality and harm relationships between group members.

Defenders of consensus blocking believe that decision rules short of unanimity do not ensure a rigorous search for full agreement before finalizing decisions. They value the commitment to reaching unanimity and the full collaborative effort this goal requires. They believe that under the right conditions unanimous consent is achievable and the process of getting there strengthens group relationships.

Conditions that Favor Unanimity

The goals of requiring unanimity are only fully realized when a group is successful in reaching it. Thus, it is important to consider what conditions make full agreement more likely. Here are some of the most important factors that improve the chances of successfully reaching unanimity:

- Small group size
- Clear common purpose
- High levels of trust
- Participants well trained in consensus process
- Participants willing to put the best interest of the group before their own
- Participants willing to spend sufficient time in meetings
- Skillful facilitation and agenda preparation

Using Other Decisions Rules with a Consensus Process

Many groups use a consensus decision making process with non-unanimous decision rules. The consensus process can help prevent problems associated with Robert's Rules of Order or top-down decision making. This allows majority rule or hierarchical organizations to benefit from the collaborative efforts of the whole group and the resulting joint ownership of final proposals. For instance, a small business owner may convene a consensus decision making discussion among her staff to generate a proposal for changes to the business. After the proposal is developed, however, the business owner may retain the authority to accept or reject it. The benefits of consensus decision making are lost, however, if the final decision is made without regard to the efforts of the whole group. When group leaders or majority factions reject proposals that have been developed with widespread agreement of a group, the goals of consensus decision making will not be realized.

More Elaborate Models of Consensus Decision Making

As the field of group facilitation has evolved, more detailed models of consensus decision making have been developed. One example is the CODM model (consensus-oriented decision making). Newer models focus on the process of group collaboration, increasing understanding within the field of how collaboration can be best fostered and what facilitation techniques can promote it.

Appendix B: Leading a Book Study Discussion

1. Read the book/listen to the podcast/watch the video - This may seem obvious, but it is the most important step, so it is worth stating.
2. Make notes and comments – Underline important passages and circle important page numbers so that you can access the passages easily while leading your book discussion
3. Come up with a few questions about the book: Examples:
  - What is the author’s overall theme? What is the major theme(s) of this chapter?
  - What evidence did the author present to support the theme?
  - What do think the author means by, “(quote or key phrase from the book)”.
  - What idea did the author present that surprised and impressed you?
  - Was there a weakness in the author’s point of view?
  - How do the ideas in the chapter relate to your work and role?
  - What were the implications for leadership?

4. Let others answer first - When you are asking questions, you want to facilitate discussion, not come off as a teacher. By letting others answer first, you will promote conversation and help everyone feel like their opinions matter.

Note: Sometimes people may need to think before they answer. Part of being a good leader is being comfortable with silence. Don't feel like you have to jump in if no one answers immediately. If needed, clarify, expand or rephrase the question.

5. Make connections between comments - If someone gives an answer to question 2 that connects well with question 5, don't feel obligated to ask questions 3 and 4 before moving to 5. You are the leader, you can go in whatever order you want. Even if you go in order, try to find a link between an answer and the next question. By connecting people's comments to the questions, you'll help build momentum in the conversation.
6. Occasionally direct questions toward quiet people - You don't want to put anyone on the spot, but you want everyone to know their opinions are valued. If you have a few talkative people who always jump right in, directing a question to a specific person may help draw out the quieter people (and let the loud people know it is time to give someone else a turn).
7. Rein in tangents - Book studies are popular not only because people like to read, but also because they are great social outlets. A little off topic conversation is fine, but you also want to respect the fact that people have read the book and expect to talk about it. Recognize tangents and bring the discussion back to the book.
8. Don't feel obligated to get through all the questions - The best questions sometimes lead to intense conversations. That's a good thing! The questions are there as a guide. While you will want to get through at least three or four questions, it will probably be rare that you finish all ten. Respect people's time by wrapping up the discussion when the meeting time is over rather than pushing on until you finish everything you planned.

9. Wrap up the discussion - One good way to wrap up a conversation and help people summarize their opinions of the book is to ask each person to rate the book on a scale of one to five.

Tips:

1. When planning discussion questions, avoid questions that are too general, like "What did you think of the book?" Also avoid questions that have yes or no answers. You want to ask questions that are open ended and help people talk about themes and how the book relates to deeper issues.
2. Refrain from making dismissive statements toward other people's comments. Even if you disagree, take the conversation back to the book rather than saying "That's ridiculous," etc. Making people feel embarrassed or defensive is a sure way to shut down the conversation.

Appendix C: Effective Notetaking in Meetings

What's the role of the notetaker?

At each meeting, one of the quarter group members is assigned the role of notetaker. The notetaker is responsible for recording minutes from the meeting discussion. The draft minutes are shared with the associates and advisors within a week of the meeting. The notetaker will make any edits based on the synthesizing comments received.

Why take minutes?

Good minutes help drive a plan of action for the team. They clarify how, when, why, and by whom decisions were made. They map out a plan for the action items (which helps get the work done) and they later provide valuable information to those associates and advisors who can't attend the meeting.

Effective minutes also record meeting decisions, which makes them a useful review document when it comes time to measure progress. Further, they act as an accountability tool because they make it clear whose duty it was to perform which action.

What's included in the minutes?

Minutes should be simple lists of decisions made and actions that need to be taken (with the responsible person identified). Generally, minutes should be as short as possible as long as they highlight all key information.

Appendix D: Curriculum Principles

A Framework for Learning

Providing experiential opportunities through interaction with federal executives, participation in SFEB programs and activities to develop leadership potential

Guiding Principles

The guiding principles of the Associates Program curriculum are derived from the Office of Personnel Management's standards for federal Senior Executive Service. OPM sets forth core qualifications and core competencies that must be developed in government leaders.

Core qualifications include the ability to lead change and lead people. Developing leaders must be results driven. They also must demonstrate business acumen and the ability to build coalitions in a diverse environment.

Core Qualifications

- Ability to lead people
- Ability to lead change
- Leadership that is driven by results
- Demonstrated business acumen
- Ability to build coalitions

Core Competencies

Underlying the five core qualifications are the development of six core competencies. These competencies are essential to success in achieving each core qualification. Over the two years of program participation, each associate is expected to gain experience in all areas through a variety of trainings, projects, committee involvement, meeting participation, interaction with advisors, job shadows and service activities.

- Interpersonal Skills
- Oral Communication
- Integrity/Honesty

Training topics

The content of the program curriculum is guided by reference to these core competencies. Each Associate is exposed to or offered the opportunity to attend formal training in these critical areas over the two-year program. Training topic lists will be reviewed by the associates and advisors and modified as needed on an annual basis.

Core competencies will be used as foundational guidelines. Training topics will also be reviewed for relevancy to current associates' needs and individual interests. It is expected that the group will determine annual goals and objectives through team exercises, active participation and consensus decision making.

Structure

Individual Participation Checklist

- Each Associate maintains record of their individual participation in trainings, events and required program activities. This record reflects their contract with the program signed at program entry.
- Basic attendance and participation is reviewed with the individual Advisor and, if necessary, with the SFEB Director.

True benefit from the program is on the principle that each Associate receive in measure with the energy, effort and thought put into the program and to learning. Program participation, while monitored, should primarily reflect both personal commitment as well as the professional agreement made with the SFEB and with their agency.

Time commitment:

Approximately twenty percent of an Associate's work time is devoted to tasks, projects and professional development related to this program. This program is not intended to extend an employee's work hours or to incur any overtime.

Associates are expected to attend all monthly meetings, and to fully participate in the committees and the group project. If Associates miss more than 2 of the monthly meetings without an agreement from the Executive Director, they will be dropped from the program without reimbursement.

Tuition:

The tuition for 2022-2024 is $2000 per Associate for the entire two years. The costs of the program cover training fees and meeting materials. Please contact the Executive Director at diana.deforest@gsa.gov or 206-384-2689 with any questions about the tuition.

If Associates or their agencies decide to withdraw them from the program after March 1, 2022, the tuition will not be reimbursed.

Tuition may be submitted to the Federal Executive Board as soon as the Associates are notified of acceptance and should be paid no later than March 1, 2022.

The Seattle Federal Executive Board Associates Program is purposely small, with approximately 8 new Associates admitted each year. As a result of the size and format of the program, the application process is competitive. We welcome former applicants who were not successful to apply again if they are still interested and their agencies agree to recommend them.

Thank you.
